Steamer General Chanzy. Cindadela, Balearic Islands, Feb. 14.

—Marcel Rodel, the sole survivor of the steamer General Chanzy, which was wrecked Thursday on a reef off the Island of Minorca, told a thrilling narrative prior to his departure for France this evening of the terrible experiences of the steamer and those on board.

"When the Chanzy left Marseilles she encountered a rough sea and a northerly gale. The passengers were not apprehensive, however, and all retired on the night of the 5th in good spirits. At 5 o'clock the next morning I was awakened by a splitting crash, as if the ship's flank had been torn on a ledge. I dressed partially and hurried out of the cabin. Saliors were trying to reassure the passengers, but their words had no effect on the crowd of men and women, many of whom were dragging children.

"The darkness added terror to the frightful scene. Enormous seas were breaking over the steamer. One sea ripped off a railing to which a score of women and children were clinging. Their shrieks as they disappeared were drowned by the roar of the storm.

MISSING LAND OFFICE LETTERS

Open at Seattle-Glavis Declares This a Trick Against Him,

Pinchot congressional inquiry began to bristle with interest today when John J. Vertees, counsel for Secretary Balof Louis R. Glavis, principal witness for the "prosecution."

Glavis Angry. Glavis Angry.

The climax of the day was reached late in the session, when Mr. Vertrees announced that a box belonging to Mr. Glavis and left/in the grand jury room at Seattle, Wash, was broken into a few days ago and a number of letters missing from the files of the land office in Seattle, copies of which have recently been published in a weekly paper, were found therein.

Glavis angrily declared that if any letters were found in his belongings, a "frame-up" had been prepared against him. His denunciation of federal officials who would stoop to such a trick

Throughout the hearing the sympathles of the spectators, a great majority of whom are women, have clearly been with Glavis, and they have laughed with satisfaction as he has made points against the questioners, who in the past were members of the committee, but today were counsel for Mr. Ballinger.

Mr. Vertrees announced that C. A. Christiansen, Glavis' successor as chief of the field division, would be called to testify about the finding of the letters. He offered in evidence a letter from Christiansen describing the alleged discovery and the committee set into covery, and the committee got into a long wrangle over whether or not it should be received in ecidence. The matter was deferred until tomorrow's Search for Missing Craft Pushed with All Possible Despatch.

Washington, Feb, 14.—The search of the United States navy and revenue cutter service for the naval tug Nina and her crew of thirty-two men was continued today with grim fidelity. Not a trace of the little craft has been found at the end of the third day of the exploration of the Atlantic and the only ray of hope is found in the absence of any reports of wreckage in the broad expanse of water from Norfolk to Boston. Even this hope is discounted by the fact that the vessel, being of steel construction, may have gone suddenly to the bottom of the sea before the crew had time to launch a boat or displace a life preserver. All a Matter of Conjecture.

Today the navy department ordered the fast scout cruiser Salem, which is searching the Virginia capes, to proceed to winter quarters and Fenwick Island lightships, a little above Fog island off that Virginia shore, to explore the waters in that vicinity. This action was taken as a result of word from the recruiting officer at Baltimore that the Merchants and Miners steamship Howard sighted the Baltimore that the Merchants and Miners steamship Howard sighted the Nina at noon, February 6, nine miles southeast of Hog Island, which is just below the lightships toward which the Salem has been sent. At that time, only a few hours after she left Norfolk, she was heading northeast. A gale from the northwest, with increasing velocity, was tossing the tug about and the sea and spray were washing over her pilot house. The Howard passed within one-eighth of a mile of the craft and one man could by seen on the bridge. She was weathering the gale, however, and did not seem to need any assistance at that time.

CHARLES R. HEIKE

MUST STAND TRIAL. SLIDING SCALE AGREEMENT American Sugar Refining Company

New York, Feb. 14.—Charles R. Heike, secretary of the American Sugar Refining company, the sugar trust, is not immune. He must stand trial, beginning March 1, on indictments charging him with other employes of the company with consorring ments charging him with other employes of the company with conspiring to defraud the government by underweighing imports of sugar.

For weeks past counsel for Heike have attempted to prove before a jury in the United States circuit court that Heike should not be prosecuted in view of the testimony he gave before the grand jury which returned the indictments. But in this they failed, for Judge Martin ruled today that in the ment. The two remaining unions will issue calls tomorrow for special meetings to discuss the subject. Under the terms of the agreement, the unions have until Monday, February 28, to give notice of a desire to withdraw from the sliding scale arrangement. Should the agreement be rescinded, a demand for an advance in wages will be presented, it is expected. Manufacturers say that the present condition of business is far from satisfactory, but that they have kept the machinery in operation, despite strong pressure from Boston to induce them to curtail.

In the event of a movement to declare a strike for higher wages, it is stated the mills will be shut down without waiting for the operatives to walk out. The general belief is that the unions will withdraw from the silding scale agreement, unless the margin is altered radically and in favor of the operatives.

Of the testimony he gave belore the grand jury which returned the indictments. But in this they indict ments. But in this they indict.

Judge Martin ruled today that in the court's opinion the defendant was not entired to immunity. Accordingly he instructed the jury to bring in a formal verdict dismissing the plea interposed in the secretary's behalf.

In arguing for immunity, counsel for Heike admitted his guilt, but maintained that though guilty his testimony before the grand jury was a bar to prosecution. This led the government that if the plea was not sustained the government would move for immediate sentence on the ground of administing for the operatives to walk out.
